

Allen Dulles Gives Senators 'Far From Relaxing' Report

Washington, Jan. 18 (AP) — Allen W. Dulles, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, gave senators a secret briefing today on world conditions which Senator Gore (D., Tenn.) said could not be reconciled with "a policy of defense cutbacks."

Gore said after listening to Dulles, who spent two hours and 50 minutes with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

"It was far from relaxing. I do not see how a policy of defense cutbacks can be reconciled with the intelligence report to which I have just been listening."

"Get Our Hands Full"

Senator Sparkman (D., Ala.) said Dulles gave the committee an objective report on the Communist bloc, economically, militarily and politically.

"Over-all, I think it was about what I expected it would be," Sparkman said. "We've got our hands full—there's no question about that."

Senator Mansfield (D., Mont.), the assistant Senate majority leader, called it "a very sober report, but not unencouraging."

None of the committee, including Chairman Fulbright (D., Ark.), would give any details of the briefing. But Fulbright said Dulles didn't "gloss over the hard facts of life, like some have done in their public statements."

"The briefing was entirely on the record," Fulbright said. "Mr. Dulles gave a very broad outline of conditions in all parts of the world."

"He gave us a much more reliable report than what can be gotten in a public appearance."

Survey Of Problems

Fulbright said the situation was "not very satisfactory from my point of view." He added that Dulles did not evaluate the military position of Russia as against the United States but gave a detailed review of intelligence reports on the military and economic strength of the Soviet Union and the Red bloc.

He called it an "an honest, realistic account."

Defense Cuts Cause Concern to Senators

Allen W. Dulles, director of the Central Intelligence Agency gave Senators a secret briefing yesterday on world conditions which Sen. Albert Gore (D-Tenn.) said could not be reconciled with "a policy of defense cutbacks."

Gore told reporters after listening to Dulles, who spent 2 hours and 50 minutes with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee:

"It was far from relaxing. I do not see how a policy of defense cutbacks can be reconciled with the intelligence report to which I have just been listening."

Sen. John Sparkman (D-Ala.) said Dulles gave an objective report on the Communist bloc, economically, military and politically.

"Over-all, I think it was about what I expected it would be," Sparkman observed to newsmen. "We've got our hands full—there's no question about that."

Sen. Mike Mansfield (D-Mont.), the Assistant Senate Majority Leader, called it "a very sober report, but not unencouraging."

None of the Committee, including Chairman J. William Fulbright (D-Ark.) would give any details of the briefing. But Fulbright said Dulles didn't "gloss over the hard facts of life, like some have done in their public statements."

"The briefing was entirely off the record," Fulbright told the reporters. "Dulles gave a very broad outline of conditions in all parts of the world. He gave us a much more reliable report than what can be gotten in a public appearance."

Fulbright said the situation was "not very satisfactory from my point of view."
